

NEW-YORKISMS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6, 1869. The Ideal Reporter of the Period. Methinks I see him now. There he goes up Centre street toward the Tombs. He is going to learn the particulars of the latest police case. Yesterday he interviewed Mr. Corbin, to-day he confronted Mr. Fisk; to-morrow he will board the Woman's Bureau. He is paid from fifteen to twenty dollars a week for worming secrets out of people and blazening them in the newspaper. His cheek must know no blush, his eyes no blenching. His forehead must be bronze. He must elevate lying into a fine art. He must tread on all his own fine feelings, if he ever had any, as ruthlessly as on those of other people. The last vestiges of bashfulness he must trample down, until not the remotest shadow of a remnant remains. He must enter rooms without knocking at doors. He must listen to conversations held under breath, and repeat them in the local columns; he must win confidences and violate them; he must first charm and then chatter. He must wait like a lackey in the halls of the wealthy, and come and come again until the master chooses to see him and submit to the brazen process of being interviewed. He must be snubbed by officials small and great, and indirectly bullied by the managing editor if his report is one fact shorter than that of any other newspaper. He must hold himself in readiness to be called upon from the noon of one day to the noon of another, and must be as completely shut out from society as though there were no brilliant dinners, breakfasts, and balls, like those he reports. He must accustom himself to be stared at, with as much imperturbability as though he were the President or a popular prima donna, without the dignity of the one or the ecstacy of the other. He must bear the brunt of echoing sentiments not his own from the necessity of getting a living, and when he has particularly pleased his chief he has the satisfaction of being informed, by the parties reported, that "if that reporter ever shows himself around here again, I'll skin him!" This is the ideal New York reporter. Is he realized yet? "Them Cabs."

The sixth of October is here, but "i fer ebs cabs" which were promised us are not. I refer to the Hansons. At first, they were to have been here on the first of July. Then they were expected on the first of September. Finally, they were anticipated by people having a large preponderance of hope on the first of the present month. At the present writing they are not looked for at all. The project has sunk, never to be resuscitated again, until public confidence is "restored" in Jim Fisk. The office may be seen upon Wall street, within two blocks of the ferry, where it occupies a basement. It is painted with elaborate ornamentation, and remains a sad monument to the fond credulity of Gothamites. I own to having shared in that credulity myself. I confess to having encouraged expectations—and, shall I add, envy?—in Philadelphia, which the result does not justify. I acknowledge having sown, to some small extent, the seeds of a belief that New York was advancing Hansom-cabwards. That belief, after having been shaken to its centre, no longer exists. "Them cabs" is a myth, not a manufacture.

Buying Editorial Columns.

There is a fight between Mayor Oakey Hall and the Sun newspaper. The Mayor has taken his revenge upon the Sun for having spoken impudently of him, by sending for publication, to the other morning newspapers, the copy of a receipt for sixty-two dollars, signed by the Sun's cashier, for a notice in the editorial columns. From a dunning letter, too, which the Times takes a spiteful pleasure in republishing, and which was addressed last January by Mr. England, the business manager of the Sun, to Oakey Hall. It seems that that newspaper was having its last penny sucked up by that remorseless cormorant the press. It must have felt very severely pinched when it yielded its editorial columns for the paltry sum of sixty dollars. This is the way sensation papers flourish. The quarrel is not perhaps a very dignified one, but then no one expects dignity from a Mayor who signs official documents with the fantastic monogram which originated in the brain of Oakey Hall.

The "Baron" de Riviere.

Appropos of this person, to whom in a recent letter I had occasion to refer in connection with a Mad'le Stille, who represents herself to have lost her heart and $7500 through him, I have a little reminiscence to relate. The newspapers here seem strangely oblivious of him, although it cannot be more than six or seven years ago since he figured here under the title of "Count." It is ridiculously asserted that he was one of Lola Montez' friends and companions. That lady, however, persistently asserted that she never knew him, although she had heard of him abroad. The "Baron," or the "Count"—for this is one of those cases where you pay your money and you take your choice—is one of the most gifted and successful pursuers of adventure that the present age has produced. When he was last in this city he was extremely handsome, and bore the fascinating reputation of being a devil among the women. He was made at home by some of the very best families, and his plausibility succeeded to that extent that a certain Count, (a genuine Count and a gentleman, in the true sense of that word) whose name I forget, but who is at present residing in Paris, and who was at that time editor and proprietor of Le Courrier des Etats-Unis, became his bosom friend. At that time Col. John S. Du Solle was (as, indeed, he is now) writing some of the most brilliant broadsides that appeared in the editorial columns of the Sunday Times of this city. In the course of these editorial philippics, the Colonel's devastating pen encountered the reputation of the Count de Riviere, and stabbed it through with holes that never could be mended. The Count de Riviere saw the article, and made up his mind that Colonel Du Solle's blood (next day the young nobleman whom I have mentioned as De Riviere's friend called upon the editor with the customary cartel of defiance, and explained that as the Colonel's instincts were French, and, moreover, as he was partially French by birth, he, the Count, should expect him to conduct himself by French rules, and not American, and to accept the challenge.

"I shall not accept," replied the Colonel, who can be exceedingly impressive in manner upon occasion. "I refuse, on the ground that your principal is not a gentleman. Neither would I accept a challenge from you, although by the usages of the duello I might, perhaps, be expected to. You are a gentleman, and some day or other will discover the real character of your principal."

This candid, characteristic statement must have appealed to some suspicious lurking in the young nobleman's own breast. At any rate, the cartel was withdrawn, and no challenge upon his own account was sent in by De Riviere's second. The Colonel, who was then a member of the French Benevolent Society, and who had a sympathy with everything that was French, provided it was also virtuous, stowed this fact away in his memory, in company with some million other of his experiences, and never heard of De Riviere again until the other day he turned up in the Tombs.

The Sorrows. This association has held its first meeting after its summer rest. There is a split in it already, the elder and the younger women disagreeing on the main question. Youth and crabbled age, you know, cannot lie together—nor even lunch together at Delmonico's without separating in a row. ALI BABA.

CITY ITEMS.

SUNSHINE, PHILADELPHIA FIREPLACE STOVE and WARM AIR FURNACE COMBINED. Superior in every respect to any Fireplace Heater in the market, and twenty years in advance of any in the United States. This is no vain boast, and can be demonstrated to any person upon examination. This has been the most successful Fireplace Heater ever introduced. It has never been Puffed and Blowed to bring it into notice, but has worked itself into a larger sale in two seasons by its INTRINSIC MERITS than any New York or Baltimore Fireplace Stove that has been advertised for fifteen years. All the LATEST and WELL-CONCEIVED PRINCIPLES of consuming coal with economy are embodied in the SUNSHINE. It has a GREATER Radiating surface than any other Heater. IT IS THE ONLY WARM AIR FIREPLACE HEATER yet introduced. Years of PRACTICAL EXPERIENCE in erecting Fireplaces Stoves and Heaters have demonstrated their deficiencies, all of which we have avoided in the SUNSHINE. All parts of this stove are made from the very best material, and in the most substantial manner, ALL UNDER THE SUPERINTENDENCE OF THE PATENTEE.

GEORGE F. STICK & CO., No. 333 N. Second Street, Philadelphia.

THE LARGEST WORKSHOP OF THE BODY is the Liver, whose office it is to withdraw the bile from the blood; when this important organ does not act, the skin assumes a yellow appearance, and generally a sick headache sets in, with chilly sensations, and cold hands and feet, accompanied with loss of appetite. The system becomes clogged, the machinery does not work well, and both mind and body are disordered, the afflicted becoming cross and fretful, finding fault with everything around them. To any person in this condition DR. D. JAYNE'S SENSITIVE PILLS are recommended; by their stimulating action the Liver soon recovers its healthy tone, and is enabled to perform its proper functions. Costiveness is cured, and all the aggravating symptoms of Biliousness removed. Sold every where.

HOVER'S PATENT

Combination Sofa Bed

Is decidedly the best Sofa Bed ever invented. It can be extended from a Sofa into a handsome French Bedstead, in ten seconds of time. It is furnished with hair spring mattress, in ten sections of time. It is furnished with no unscrewing or detaching, has no separation between back and seat, no cords to break, and no hinges out attached to the top of the back to support it when down, which is unsafe and liable to get out of repair. It has the convenience of a bureau for holding clothing, is easily managed, and it is impossible for it to get out of order. Price about the same as an ordinary sofa.

H. F. HOVER, OWNER AND SOLE MANUFACTURER, 10 5 2t No. 239 South SECOND Street.
